Pastor Dave's Corner:

Is the image to the right familiar? If you are participating in our Lenten Study, The Message of Jesus: Words That Changed the World, it probably does. The upper half adorns the cover of our study book. The image is known as Christ Pantocrator, which means “ruler of all.” It is a 6th century icon in St.

Catherine’s Monastery on Mt. Sinai in Egypt. It is one of the earliest depictions of Christ as ruler of all.

Iconography is the original form of sacred Christian art and has been integral to worship and the mystical life of Christians from the time of the apostles. Today, icons are more common in Eastern and Russian Orthodox and Eastern Catholic churches. In the Eastern Christian tradition, they are considered “windows into heaven.” Tradition has it that the first iconographer was the gospel author, St. Luke.

In the 7th and 8th centuries iconography was controversial. One group, the iconoclasts, believed images of human beings or Christ were a form of idolatry. The iconodules, who defended the place of icons in the life of the church, won out; although during the Protestant Reformation, some Protestant denominations took a similar “puritan” view.

In the Orthodox Christian tradition, icons have a purpose; to raise the soul and mind of the believer to the spiritual realm through material means. Creating an icon is a sacred endeavor undertaken by the iconographer. It is said they paint as they pray so that through prayer, they are inspired by the Holy Spirit to illuminate a glimpse of the divine. Unlike Western sacred art where the artist depicts the subject in a natural and realistic style, the iconographer depicts the subject as they are thought to be in eternity. Hence, the distorted images of icons. This is accomplished through standardized forms and colors that have been handed down over centuries. It is meant to express abstract spiritualized forms.

Common features of icons are stylized, non-natural, geometric forms to clothing meant to represent heavenly order; stylized facial features meant to represent the divine appearance; halos to signify sanctity and draw attention to the face, and unusually thin hands in a gesture of blessing. Buildings, mountains, trees, and animals are simplified. Even the sequence of events is compressed, altering time and space. In The Nativity of Christ, the birth of Jesus, his bathing by the midwives, the angel’s announcement to the shepherds, and the visitation by the Magi all appear in the same icon. Even perspective is different. Unlike Western sacred art, which attempts to create 3-dimensionality, icons often portray less important objects in the foreground smaller than more important subjects behind them.

The next time you see an icon, I hope you will take a moment to ponder it and be blessed by this sacred art form from our Orthodox brothers and sisters in Christ.

Pastor Dave.
